

Giving thanks for the Harvest

Through secondary school scholarships, A Rocha Kenya's ASSETS programme responds to the needs of local children, while promoting the conservation of East Africa's largest remnant of dry coastal forest. Our Harvest offering will enable students to plant native trees in and around the Arabuko-Sokoke Forest to restore degraded areas of this threatened ecosystem.

We're on our way to our target ...

Students and their parents are taught about the value of their natural environment and are involved in practical conservation activities. Every year, more than 10,000 native trees are planted in schools and identified areas within the Arabuko-Sokoke Forest.
